polishes it with bayonets. Then it dusts it with martial law. Then, finally, if it goes Radical, like Mississippi, it says "Now, isn't it beautiful." The people are sick of this. There is no fun in it all well enough as a circus trick, but it is too serious when applied to real life. Does anybody through here know Mr. William Cook, United States Vice Consul at Glasgow, Scotland? It makes no difference, however, whether anybody knows him or not. We ask the question merely incidentally in connection with a tatement of the fact, brought by cable dispatch last night, that the young man has just been sentenced by a Scottish court to seven years' imprisonment for torgery. Mr. Cook is another Radical office-holder fate of a good many Radical office holders just now. But Mr. Cook is a much greater fool than knave, no matter llow great a knave he may be. The world moves certainly. Things are changed the very face of nature. The old scenes and habits and customs and charaters, with which English literature abounds and of which all cultivated readers must be fond, are to be encountered but rarely as one journeys over the country. The sleepy villages are turned into busy rail-way stations. The inns are converted into hetels. Smoke stacks and whistles are as requent as church spires; and much of the rostic simplicity has disappeared. Amid all the change, rising out of the moss and ruin of centuries, joining the materialism of the present to the misty poetry and chiralric legend of the past, stands, like West, minster Abbey something the worse for wear, the House of Lords. Its history tells leal also that is nable and inspiring. It s, perhaps, the finest monument in the patriotism, loyalty, and valor; of justice and law, oppression and wrong; of the strength and the weakness of human and the imperfections of free government. distrust prevails, it takes more money to noid up prices than in times of faith and conditions. The amount of money in circulation is nominally stationary, and has been so for several year; but, by spreading the nominal amount over a great extent of country, the available amount for this measurement of of more property has to be sustained or not sustained on a given volume of money, and hence prices give way; and the decline in prices impairs confidence, and hence a farther decline.

The great financial problem of the hour is, how to sustain prices. Nothing short of a restoration of confidence and credits, and an colarged volume of currences, will do it.
